Some Plain Talk About the Electric-Light Contract—What the Committees Recommended-Other Business

The Common Council met last night at When the body was called to order by President Campbell only thirteen members were present, and on motion of Mr. Steel a recess was taken for twenty minutes. At the end of that time when the body reassembled Mr. Guigou announced that the German parade was coming down Broad street, and he moved another recess

Broad street, and he moved another recess for lifteen minutes, which was adopted. When the body met again the following members answered to the roll-call: Messrs. Braner, Carter, Carneal, Courtney, Curtis, Diacont, Fergusson, Ferriter, Gaines, Glover, Grimes, Gnigon, Houston, Jackson, Mann, Garber, Philips, Steel, Stratton, Thomas, Trower, J. W. White, Royal White, and Campbell.

The reading of the record was dispensed with and the Council proceeded to work.

STREET COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.

STREET COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Committee on Streets recommended the adoption of the following ordinances:
Granting permission to Mrs. V. A. Hagan, John W. Drake, and D. E. Francis to gan, John W. Drake, and D. E. Francis to allow certain gates to swing outward upon certain streets. Adopted, after being amended so as to require the gates to be equipped with self-closing springs. Granting permission to the Richmond Lee Company to erect an overhead bridge on the south side of Dock street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. Adopted. Authorizing the Committee on Streets

Authorizing the Committee on Streets to permit certain encroachments on the streets by signs, porches, windows, etc.

Mr. Guigon vigorously opposed allowing the Committee on Streets unlimited power in this matter. This is no longer a town, be contended, but a city, and everything that effects its interests should be passed upon by the Council of the people.

Mr. Stratton, a member of the Street Committee, took the same view of the case. Case.

The ordinance was adopted by a vote of

RICHMOND AND DANVILLE TRACK.

The Street Committee also recommended an ordinance granting permission to the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company to construct a spur track on Wharf street, Adopted. The same committee asked the adoption of an ordinance requiring railroad com-panies to provide against injury to person and property by putting suitable flooring upon so much of their trestles or bridges as are constructed above grade across the streets of the city.

The object of this ordinance is to require the flooring to be so close as to prevent ashes, coal, or other material falling through and striking persons walking be-FINANCE REPORTS.

The Committee on Finance recommended the adoption of the following resolutions: Appropriating $3,000 to pave sidewalks, Adopted.

Adopted.

Appropriating $50,000 in bonds for the construction of culverts. Agreed to.

Appropriating $500 to pay W. T. Loving for land to open Pickett street. Adopted.

Appropriating $1,000 to the expense account of Oakwood cemetery. Agreed to. THE COW OUTTNANCE.

THE COW ORDENANCE.

The ordinance to provent cows running at large upon the streets came up as unfinished business, and Mr. Mann offered an amendment to make the fine not less than $2 and not more than $5, and to include goats. He said he thought they were a greater nuisance than cows, and if he had his way he would include dozs.

Mr. Guigon expressly advocated the adoption of the ordinance with the amendment offered by Mr. Mann, Our people, he said, whisther they live on the suburbs or in the central portion of the city, should

FULTON OFFOSES IT.

Garber said in Fulton where he Mr. Garber said in Fulton where he came from a large number of poor persons keep cows for a livelihood, and while the ordinance might suit the central part of the city it would work a hardship upon his section, and therefore he opposed it.

Mr. Diacont opposed the adoption of either the ordinance or the amendment.

Mr. Courtney said he was proud to say he was from Madison Ward, but proader to acknowledge that he was a citizen of Richmond. He was of the country. He called attention to the fact that every day hundreds of cows can be seen drinking admireds of cows can be seen drinking water from Shockoe creek into which flows thousands of gallons of refuse mat-ter, and the milk from those cows is drank daily by the people of Richmond.

Mr. Stratton in advocating the ordinance said its effect did not seem to be understood. It will not prevent the keeping of cows in the city, but only prohibits them running at large unattended. He argued to show that it is net right and just for the property of 200 persons in this city to trespass upon the property of thousands of others.

Messrs, Mann and Geine

sands of others.

Messrs, Mann and Gaines presented petitions from residents of Marshall and titions from residents of Marshall and Jefferson wards opposing the ordinance. THE ORDINANCE PASSED.

THE ORDINANCE PASSID.

Mr. Campbell (Mr. Glover in the chair) offered an amendment to make the fine not less than $1 and not more than $5. This was accented by Mr. Mann and adopted. The ordinance was then passed by the following vote:

AYES.—Messrs. Brauer. Campbell, Carter, Carneal, Courtony, Cartis, Fergusson, Ferfier, Giever, Guigoe, Houston, Jackson, Philips, Steel, Stration, Thomas, Trower, and J. W. White—IS.

NOES.—Messrs. Diacont, Gaines, Grimes, Magn, Garber, and Reyal White—6.

THE ELECTRIC PLANT.

When the resolution from the Board of Aldermen authorizing the Committee on Electric Lights to advertise for contracts for furnishing electric lights for twelve months or a shorter period, if expedient, was reported, Mr. Gaines offered an amendment to the effect that contracts for five years be advertised for. He said as lighting streets by electricity is comparatively in its infancy it would be well to wait awhile before thinking of establishing an electric plant, as improvements are constantly being made in electric machinery.

CHOOKED BUSINESS HINTED AT-At this point Mr. Courtney called attention to the fact that the committee's record plainly showed that the contract for electric lights that is are-lights, and no provision made for incandescents in any manner whatover was signed by the chairman, Mr. R. W. Powers, on January 8, 1886, the same having been approved by a majority of the committee. This record, 8, 1886, the same having been approved or a majority of the committee. This record, Mr. Courtney charged, was changed by a peneil to February 8, 1886. It was difficult, he said, to understand why the contract should read February 8th when the minutes read January 8, 1886.

WANTED TO MONOFOLIZE MATTERS.

Mr. Courtney also stated that when the Richmond Railway and Electric Company went to the Legislature last winter to get their property consolidated the City Council sent a committee there to look after the interests of Richmond. He was not a member of that committee, but he and Mr. Lewis D. Crenshaw went before the legislative committee as private citizens. He learned that the real object of the company was not to consolidate their property, as they already had that right under a law passed twelve years ago, but their idea was to crush out our gas-works. When it was proposed to put an amendment to the bill to the effect that when Richmond should establish its own electric plant the company should cease to sell lights no objection was made. It was then he learned, Mr. Courtney explained, what the consolidation company already knew, that Richmond had no right to erect an electric plant. WANTED TO MONOPOLIZE MATTERS.

GOT AN AMENDMENT,

As a private citizen he drafted a bill authority. The measure was put in the hands of Mr. Lovenstein in the Senate and Mr. Curtis in the House and passed by both branches and signed by the Governor before the electric company knew any.

both branches and signed by the Governor before the electric company knew anything about it. It was then, Mr. Courtney said, that one of the persons interested in the consolidation came to him and said he had ruined them.

The whole object of this company, Mr. Courtney intimated, was to get the city at its mercy. If the city had no right to erect and operate its electric plant the company could have put the price of lights so low as to crush out our gas-works, but their game, he said, was foiled.

The amendment offered by Mr. Gaines was lost and the original was almost unanimously adopted.

THE BROAD-STREET VIADUCT The Room-street viaduct.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Ferguson and adopted:

Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Richmond (the Board of Aldermen concurring), That a special committee be appointed consisting of four members of the Common Council and three members of the Board of Aldermen with the City Engineer, to consider and report—first, as to the advisability of constructing an iron

Considerable excitement was occasioned on Sixth street yesterday by a ruraway in which no one was hurt, but a buggy and harness were badly damaged. The team belonged to Mr. T. F. Minor and was in charge of one of his clerks, who drove to dinner. The horse took fright and started off just as the young gentleman was about to jump in, and running against a telegraph pole near the Second station-house broke out of harness and continued for a square or two. The shafts and cross-bar were broken to pieces and the front axle was slightly bent.

Tobacco Exchange Officers. A meeting of the Tobacco Exchange was held yesterday and officers were elected for the ensuing year. Under the constitution Vice-President Christian succeeded President R. A. Patterson. The other officers elected were as follows: W. G. Miller, vice-president; C. McCloud, secretary and treasurer, and R. A. Trice, auctioneer. The members of the boards and other officers were reelected.

The Board of Police Commissioners will meet at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning to consider the question raised as to whether Mr. Dennis Wren, recently elected a member of the force to fill a vacancy, comes quite up to the physical requirements.

THE MUSICALES. The musicales this season will be given as far as possible by companies complete in themselves—a great advantage to the public, as it insures better artists, and more careful preparation is thereby afforded. These companies are extremely expensive, and some fine attractions will necessarily have to be refused on account of our in adequate means. Many persons are under the impression that the rentals from the hall are or should be used towards defray ing expenses of musicales. MISSISSIPPI CONVENTION.

Report on the Pledging or Lending of the Credit of the State for Any Purpose. [By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

Jackson, Miss., October 6.—The Committee on Rights and General Provisions submitted a report to the Constitutional Convention to-day. Among the features of the report which are specially interesting are the following:

Section 3 forbids the pledging or the lending of the credit of the State in aid of any person or corporation, and deprives the State of power of ever becoming a stockholder in any association or corporation, or to asporation, and deprives the State of power of ever becoming a stockholder in any association or corporation, or to assume, redeem, secure, or pay any indebtedness due or claimed to be due by the State to any person or association whatsoever claiming the same as owners, holders, or assigns of any bond or bonds now generally known as the Union Bank's bonds or Planter's Bank bonds.

Section 6 forbids the removal of county seats located by law unless the removal be authorized by two thirds of the voters of the county; provided that when such removals shall be towards the centre of the county a majority vote will suffice.

Mr. Mays had offered on Saturday several amendments so as to preserve the status quo of the separate school districts which are now separately taxed for their own maintenance and therefore not subject to a school tax on the balance of the county.

After a long debate the Mayes amendment was tabled by a vote of 69 to 16.

Other amendments to section 6 and Jamison's substitute were also voted down, and without taking final action the convention at 6 P. M. adjourned until to-morrow, when section 6, which has created so much discussion, will doubtless be adopted by an emphatic majority. by an emphatic majority.

HOW THE COMMON SCHOOL IS TO BE RAISED. It provides that there shall be a common school fund, which shall consist of a poll-tax of two dollars on all males between the tax of two dollars on all males between the ages of twenty-one and sixty years, and an addition of not less than $600,000 per annum from the general fund in the Treasury. Said fund shall be divided among the several counties and separate school districts of the State in proportion to the number of educated children in the same, and shall in each county be supplemented by such additional sums raised by county taxation as shall suffice, together with the distributive share of such county or district, to give each child in the county or district four months' instruction in each year, said supplement fund being distributed as above among all the children of the county, including those of separate school districts; provided that any town, city, county, or school district may levy additional taxes for school purposes, and provided that no such county levy shall be extended into any town, city, or separate school district within the county making similar levies.

Novel Escape of a Murderer.

Mr. David E. Sampson preached three times on Sunday at the Friends' meeting-house on Clay street. His afternoon talk was mainly for members of the society, and was very instructive along the lines of their belief.

At each of the other meetings others also streke in works of exhautation and counsel.

At each of the other meetings others also spoke in words of exhortation and counsel. The services were much enjoyed by all who attended them, and regret was expressed that more were not present.

Mr. Sampson at the meeting yesterday morning preached a very fine discourse on the work and individuality of the Spirit.

The service was concessed and exhaustive. The sermon was concise and exhaustive, and was listened to with close attention by the congregation.

GROYE-AVENUE BAPTET CHURCH.

At this church on Sunday the pastor, Rev. Dr. S. A. Goodwin, preached morning and night to large and attentive congregations, the one at night being specially so. At the close of the morning service there were two professions of fath, one candidate was received for baptism, and three members received by letter.

After the congregation had been dismissed a church meeting was held for the purpose of deciding as to the expediency of at once putting an organ in the main anditorium of their new house of worship. It was decided to do this at once. Voluntary subscriptions for this purpose were then received, and in less than fifteen minutes the total amount necessary for the entire expense to within $250 each. The new house of worship is rapidly approaching completion, and its dedication will occur some time in the near future.

PASHION WITH THE GIBLS.

Saturday afternoon one crowd of six pirls, two of them young ladies, came here to be vaccinated. They told the inspector that they wanted the operation performed on their legs. "We don't want to dissipate our arms" was their excuse. The girls were vaccinated as they desired; but that's the last," said the doctor, bringing his first down on the table. "I want no more of them and won't bear them. If any girl is so fashionable that she is afraid a vaccination-mark will defract from her beauty in evening dress, she had better go to a private physician and have the operation performed my private. The old-fashioned way is good enough for this office, and that's what young ladies must put up with. You have no idea of the number of applicants there have been for this sort of thing lately. I believe it's a fad, nothing more."

Jefferson Davis and His Southern Enemies. [No Name Magazine.]

Byron says "he who surpasses or subdues mankind must look down upon the hate of those below." Even Washington, the most peerless public character the world has ever seen, had enemies. Cossar had his Brutus. Napoleon bis Bernadotte, and Jeferson Davis his Johnston and Beauregard. Mr. Davis expressed himself pretty freely as to his opinion of these Confederate generals in some private letters to one of his most confidential friends—letters which we have been permitted to make public. It is from such sources that we sometimes derive the most valuable historical information, Jefferson Davis was a perfect master of an easy and flowing style of letter-writing. We will lay before our readers the cream of this interesting correspondence.

"Johnston sought in various wavs to evade orders and cater to the reported preferences of the men, the repeated instructions to save stores were grossly disregarded on his needless retreat from Manassas. Careful to make a record and gain popularity but careless as to the public interest, and seeking like a demagogue to ingratiate himself by throwing on the Administration blame for every real or fanciful discomfort, it was a part of his remembered career to encourage complaints against the comissariat by canvassing among the men as to what they would like to eat. After learning they preferred bacon to beef, what is to be said of the burning of your nacking establishment, when that flight was commenced in which no man pursued?

"Many silly people talk of the mistake in not sending out the crop of cotton, and having funds thus in Europe. Johnston is not the only ignoramms who does not know that the crop of 1860-50 had mostly gone forward before the birth of the Confederacy, that it all belonged to individuals and the Confederate States Government had not money to buy it nor ships to transport. Johnston sought in various ways to and seeing that he would thus enable Sherman to move up from Columbia, and interpose between Beauregard's forces and the reinforcements which were marching to him. I sent Generai Gilmer with a letter to Beauregard ordering him to keep on the direct road to Charlotte, and gave Gilmer another letter instructing him if Beauregard did not immediately conform to the order he would present to him the authority I gave to releve him on the spot.

Learned and well-meaning men, who have brought much reflection and the purest of motives to the study of the subject, differ widely as to its best so-iution. For myself, I would offer two sug-gestions in this connection which if reflect-ed upon and reduced to practice will, I think, go far toward the solution of this most difficult question.

One of the reasons given by Beauregard for not advancing on Washington after the rout at Bull Run was the want of provisions. We find in this correspondence the following documents bearing upon this ledge of God, that will teach them their origin and the sublime destiny that awaits them in a better world; an education that will develop their superior being, that will inspire them with the love of wisdom and hatred for sin, that will make them hones, moral, God-fearing men; such an educa-tion will elevate and ennoble them and place them on a religious footing with the white man. I am commanded by General Beauregard to inform your Excellency that the stock of provisions has become alarmingly reduced in consequence of the non-fulfilment of requisitions by the Commissary-General. The General directs me to say that unless immediate supplies are forwarded in conformity with these requisitions most serious consequences are nevitable. With much respect, your obedient servant, R. "Secondly, it is a matter of observation that few colored people are mechanics. Now, to be a factor in their country's prosperity, to make their presence felt, and to give any influence whatever to their attempts to better their status, it is absolutely necessary that besides a sound religious training they should be taught to be useful, practical citizens: they should be brought up from their childhood to habits of industry; they should be taught that to flabor is honorable and that the idler is a The next day General Johnston wrote to the Commissary-General: Headquarters, Manassas, July 24, 1861.

The Matterhorn Disaster. A correspondent writes from Courma-yeur to a Milan newspaper:
During my recent visit to Chatilion I chanced to hear some details of the dread-ful accident at Cervino. Singaglia, the engineer, and the two guides, Carrel and Gorret, without either food or drink had been thirty-six hours sheltering water a rock from the storm in had been thirty-six hours sheltering under a rock from the storm in the hope that a moment's calm might enable them to reach the lower ground. But instead of diminishing the storm increased, and the cold became unbearable. A longer stay would have been certain death to all three. It seemed as well to dare death manually in a final struggle with the elements. But at this moment Carrel began to give in, and died in spite of the best care his companions could give him, while Sinigaglia's hands were swollen and bruised from hailstones as if they had been hammered.

TERRIBLE HARDSHIPS. The three climbers were bound together. Gorret (a colossus to whose strength and vigor is due the safety of himself and Siniagalia) went first, then Siniagalia, and Carrel last. The cord had become a solid bar of ice. When Carrel died Gorret tried to get his knife out of his pocket to cut the cord, but his jacket was so completely frozen that he could not get at his pocket. So for a short time time these two half-living men were compelled to drag after them the body of their dead comrade, which seemed to wish to drag them back with it into its icy tomb At last they came across a rock rising from the midst of the ice, and on that with his are Gorrett was at last able to cut the cord. With a last look at their friend and a farewell which too closely recalled the "Morituri te salutant," the two survivors continued their melancholy descent. How they saved themselves they are themselves unable to explain. A stoppage of even ten minutes would have been enough to freeze their stockings like the rest of their clothes, and then all progress would have been impossible. The three climbers were bound together language:

"I do not believe that knaves have entirely the advantage over honest men, because it is only truth which is consistent and knaves are always laying traps which discriminating minds readily detect and expose themselves by self-contradiction. This is strikingly illustrated in the case of Beauregard and Johnston. Beauregard's excuss that he did not advance on Washington for the want of provisions and transportation is unfounded in fact and untenable in argument. The reasons he gave, as stated in my book, on the night of my conference with Johnston and himself after the battle were the strength of the fortifications on the south bank of the Potomac, and the allegation that they were garrisoned by troops who were not involved in the panic caused by their defeat at Manassas. As to transportation, he had more than was necessary for ammunition and hospital stores, and with a country then teeming with supplies required nothing more. Acain, if he had not burned the bridge inguage:
"I do not believe that knaves have enstores, and with a country then teeming with supplies required nothing more. Again, if he had not burned the bridge across Bull Run, the railroad could have been at his service all the way to Alexandria, it having been repaired by the enemy as they advanced, and left in good condition.

"When Lee marched across the Potomac, though the country had then been denuded, he went without a train to carry commissary stores, so that whether the railroad to Alexandria was in a condition to be used or not, the plea cannot be sus-

THE EXPERIENCE OF THE OTHER WORLD. The day before yesterday I saw Sinigaglia. The marks of his wounds were still visible. Gorrett is getting better; he still walks with his hand in a sling, but there is hope that he will shortly be cured. The terrible tragedy of which he was the hero has left a deep impression on him; he still speaks of it as an experience of the other world, and is unable to explain how he escaped the fate of Carrel."

"As to that contemptible fellow, Jordan, whose meanness was exhibited in his malignant publication against us when we were in prison, General Cooper's endorsement is confirmed by the fact of the action of the Senate concerning which it may be well that I should give you a minute account. Appeals were made to me that for the good of the service Jordan should be separated from Beauregard, whose friends were most earnest in their appeals. Beauregard had recommended him for promotion to the grade of brigadier, and in weak compliance, I consented to the nomination. The Senate adjourned the nomination by law and usage fell, and should have been returned to the Adjutant-General's office. Senator Wigfall told me that the confirmation falled because General J. E. Johnston, who had been quartermaster general in the United States army, gave some information that Jordan, who was a deputy quartermaster, got involved in some trouble. I replied to Senator Wighl that I had been ignorant of the fact, and in that case, as in any other, fett obliged to the Senate for rejecting any nomination I might mare. It appears that the nomination which had fallen by the termination of the seniou by the senate who had seen better thys, and washed her benefactors not to lose sight of that fact:

The Balloon Created Excitement.

About one thousand people congregated around the parties who superintended the great balloon ascension last night, and Mr. Louis Fellheimer by his very generous action has proved himself the most enterprising citizen and merchant in the city of Richmond. His famous S. O. P. C. is really the town talk, and people in need of tailor-made clothing should certainly extend him a hearty support.

The next ascension will take place Friday night, when an order for a suit of clothes will be attached to the wire frame of the balloon, and on its downward flight the party finding the order and presenting it to the establishment, corner Third and Broad, will receive a suit of clothes free of any charge whatever.
